The last reverie. . . .
New York, March 13.—My room-mates are helping me as I scratch my head frenziedly in search of an appropriate theme on which to close these weekly reveries. Text, whom you may remember lies in bed in one room with his radio playing some lively music. He always plays lively music to lull himself to sleep. Ellis, our other room-mate, is in bed in his corner with his radio playing Beethoven's Fourth Symphony. He finds symphony lulls him. . . .

And what a problem. . . .
I refuse to take a hand in the controversy for, as already mentioned, I have my own problems. But my desire to stay neutral to puzzle out my own affairs is sorely tested. Text, anxious to fall asleep, is troubled by faint symphonic sounds intruding upon the swing renditions. He also complains of various gaseous conditions in his stomach. I bear the brunt of his lamentations on both counts. Added to this, of course, he does not fail to remind the walls which, he pitifully observes, are the most animate and attentive parts of our apartment—he does not fail to remind the walls that he has to rise at 5:30 a.m. to get to his radio station and start editing the news for news-hungry listeners that never seem to sleep. . . .

"In the theatre". . . .
Ellis, in turn, has no sympathy for Text. In fact he is emoting in bed entirely impervious to the wallings of the Texan. Ellis, to quote him, is "in the theatre". By this he means that he is an actor on Broadway — when he is acting. When he is not acting, he serves as an usher in a movie theatre. In this double-barrelled fashion does he answer questions about himself. . . .

Reading aloud. . . .
Ordinarily, Ellis would not be home now. He would be at work as an usher—from 5:00 in the afternoon to 2:30 in the morning. He was ill this evening and so returned home early. In an effort to stem off an approaching cold, he has taken a hot bath, aspirin, Vix vaporub, hot tea and grapefruit. (Continued on Page Four.)

STAFF ATTENDS FINAL FROLIC

Daily Banquet Held at 6.30 Tonight

New Staff Appointments to Be Announced as Season Closes

By C. W.

Tonight at 6:30 the Staff of the McGill Daily will gather together for their Annual Banquet. The reporters will cease from reporting on other people's affairs; editors will desert from their labours; everybody will forget the deadline and assemble in the Union Grill Room to celebrate after a hard year's work.

The appointments to next year's staff will be announced. Deserving reporters will become associate editors to replace the retiring incumbents. Other meritorious members of the Staff will be awarded gold rings and pins of gold, silver and bronze.

The Banquet will not merely be a celebration, but a time for good wishes and farewells. Graduating members of the staff will take leave of people whom they may never see again. Old Daily writers who have made their mark in the Montreal Star, the Gazette and the Herald will be on hand to take part in the festivities.

All reporters, editors, feature writers of the Daily are invited to attend the function. The Daily will cease publication to the sounds of merriment.

Classical Club Hears Edythe Cox on Union

The Classical Club will meet tomorrow afternoon at 4 p.m. in the Grill Room of the McGill Union. This will be the last meeting of the year. It is hoped that all the members of the club will turn out as the officers for next year will be elected.

The address will be delivered by Miss Edythe Cox, who will speak on "A Trip to Hellas." Miss Cox, a recent graduate of McGill University and now a member of the staff of the French department, has travelled a great deal in lands noted for their classical culture.

All students who desire to attend this meeting will be cordially welcomed.

Sociological Society To Hear Dr. Young

Tonight, the Sociological Society is holding a meeting at which Dr. Charles H. Young will speak on "Sociology and Social Practice." It will be held in the R.V.C. Common Room at 8:15.

Dr. Young is at present a lecturer at the Montreal School of Social Work. He studied at McGill and the University of Chicago. He has made two studies in Canadian immigrant groups and has written two books in connection with this subject. One is on "Ukrainian Canadians" and the other "Japanese Canadians," which deal with the adjustment of these ethnic groups in Canada.

RVC OBTAINS FUND FOR SCHOLARSHIPS

Receives $3,000 from Alumnae in Honour of Mrs. Vaughan

A $3,000 scholarship fund in commemoration of Mrs. Walter Vaughan's many years of service as warden of the Royal Victoria College was presented to R.V.C. by the McGill Alumnae Society in a ceremony held yesterday afternoon. The fund, called the Susan Cameron Vaughan Scholarship, will provide for an annual award of $100 to a second, third, or fourth-year R.V.C. student of outstanding merit.

The presentation was made to Mrs. Vaughan by Mrs. Gordon Sproule, chairman of the Alumnae's scholarship committee, who in turn presented it to the committee's trustees, Mrs. George C. McDonald and Miss Hazel Murchison.

Mrs. Vaughan praised the Alumnae Society for its presentation. She declared that the early alumnae, though recognizing what they had received from the university, were not aware that they could do anything for it as members of the Alumnae Society. At the present time, however, alumnae members occupied prominent positions and had gained recognition in many circles, she said.

This fact, Mrs. Vaughan continued, had brought credit to the university and had caused the Alumnae Society to realize its duty to McGill.

Debating Union

The McGill Debating Union Prize night will be held on Thursday, March 21, in the Union Ballroom. The meeting has been postponed in order to allow enough time for the completion of the inter-faculty debates.

GERMAN CLUB HEARS NOVELIST ON 'VIENNA'

The meeting of the German Club today at 8:15 p.m. in the Union Grill Room will feature an address by Mrs. Wasserman, noted Viennese author, now living in Montreal.

Mrs. Wasserman, the widow of the late Jacob Wasserman, the famous novelist, has published several books under the pen name of Marla Karlweiss. Born in Vienna, she has lived for many years in Switzerland, where she studied psychology under Professor Jung. Beside her other literary activities, she has done some lecturing and also delivered some radio speeches on literary and cultural subjects.

Union Secretary

GEORGE C. McDONALD, chosen yesterday as President of the McGill Union. At present he is Secretary of the Union. As President he will have a seat on the Students' Council.

MOCK SESSION WILL BE HELD

Dr. Hemmeon to Be Speaker

Joint Meeting to Be Held Today in Arts Building

Today the Political Economy Club will hold a joint meeting in Room 15 of the Arts Building at 2:00 p.m. The Mock Session of Parliament will be held on Monday, and to-day Cabinet ministers will be elected, party politics decided, and further decisions made. All prospective members of Parliament are welcome at this meeting.

At the Mock Session, which will be held Monday in the Union Ball Room, Dr. Hemmeon of the Economics Department will be the Speaker and James Swan will be the Prime Minister. Bruce Woodsworth, the head of the opposition, will introduce the Resolution, "Whereas the Government failed to obtain a working majority at the polls, be it hereby resolved that in the opinion of the House, the recent dissolution of Parliament was unjustified."

Anyone who wishes to speak, either for or against the motion, may get in touch with the party leaders, or sign the notice on the Arts notice board.

GRADS' SOCIETY TO SPONSOR SMOKER

Will Be Held in Honour of the 1940 Graduating Classes

In aid of the McGill C.O.C. Instruction and Equipment Fund, the Graduates Society will entertain the members of the 1940 graduating classes at a Benefit Smoker on Wednesday evening, March 27. The Smoker is being held under the management of the Montreal Branch of the Society and the Graduates Athletic Club.

The entertainment of the evening will be provided by a stage show under John Pratt B. Arch '33 who will act as Master of Ceremonies. Principal James and Mr. Hugh Crombie, President of the Graduates' Society, will deliver short speeches.

The Executive of the Society hopes that there will be a large attendance of the senior year, and has announced that the annual presentation of athletic awards will be made to the members of the five championship teams. The Society has sent out invitations addressed to each of their expected guests from the Graduates' Society.

Free refreshments will be available throughout the evening.

Congratulations
To H. B. Greetings and salutations on attaining to your august age. May there be many more.

LARGE NUMBER VOTE

72 Percent of Student Body Turns Out

FOUR ACCLAMATIONS

Townsend, Henderson, Stalker Elected Without Opposition

McGill students turned out yesterday in almost record numbers to elect Gordon Young the new head of the Students' Society. Other returns included Margery Gaunt as President of the Women's Union, and George C. McDonald as President of the McGill Union. Chosen to fill the remaining two positions on the Union House Committee were Fred C. Moore, elected to the Vice-Presidency, and R. Stewart Willis, elected to Secretaryship. Kitty Haverfield was voted Secretary of the Women's Union.

Athletic Representative.
The Students' representative to the Athletic Board for the forthcoming year will be Robert Townsend, who was elected by acclamation. Also chosen by acclamation were Lloyd Henderson as President of the Debating Union Society, and Alex M. Stalker, vice-president of the same organization.

72 per cent of the students voted this year, an increase of about five percent over last year. The Law Faculty was in front, with every member of the faculty casting his ballot to record 100% score. Next came the Theological College, with 87%, followed closely by Dentistry and Engineering with 84% and 83% respectively. In the Department of Medicine, 74% of the students went to the polls, while Commerce cast a 71% vote. Some distance behind was the Faculty of Arts and Science, where only 57% of those on the lists voted. As in former years, the lowest vote was cast in R.V.C. with only 35% of those co-eds exercising their franchise.

Those Elected:
The following is a complete list of those elected yesterday:
President of the Students' Society: Gordon Young.
President of the McGill Union: George C. McDonald.
Vice-President of the McGill Union: Fred C. Moore.
Secretary of the McGill Union: R. Stewart Willis.
Representative to the Athletic Council: Robert Townsend. (Acclamation.)
President of McGill Debating Society: Lloyd Henderson. (Acclamation.)
Vice-President of McGill Debating Society: Alex Stalker. (Acclamation.)
President of the Women's Union: Margery Gaunt.
Secretary of the Women's Union: Kitty Haverfield.
M.W.S.A. President: Maryellen Rossiter. (Acclamation.)

Reviewing the Year of Sports

Although the past year has been none too successful in the world of sport at McGill, both the football and hockey championships and our share of the basketball title having been lost, it has been very interesting and has had its share of thrills. Naturally, everyone was disappointed at the loss of these titles, but we can honestly say that the prospect is brighter for the coming year than it was this year.

The ski team, which was counted on for a championship until serious injuries crippled it, will be back almost intact along with several promising young skiers. Unless there is a repetition of the injury jinx, McGill should break the Dartmouth monopoly. Also, the hockey team stands a good chance of winning the title back from Toronto since they have the best Junior team in the college's history to draw from for replacements. The withdrawal of the McGill hockey team from the Senior Group was our undoing in this sport, and unless we enter again in the near future, these Junior teams will be counted on more and more for replacements.

Frankly, the football team was a big disappointment, and it was soon obvious that they didn't have the ability to take the title once the season got under way. However, once again the prospects are bright for a championship in this sport.

Not as much can be said for the basketball team. They had the best chance in years to win the title outright, but missed their chance through indifferent play when it really counted. The track team, which won the only major title for McGill, stands a good chance to repeat, since it is losing but few men, and has several intermediates coming up.

Among the minor sports, we won the harrier (a perennial McGill championship), the fencing, and the soccer titles. The other minor sports which take place indoors were handicapped by lack of facilities which the new gym should remedy so that in the future McGill teams will be able to give a much better account of themselves along these lines.

Idealism and the World

The world swings in its immense orbit, and human nature changes not a jot; through the centuries, the ideals taught to our children are betrayed by our men and women. Nay, even the children in daily acts crush underfoot the life of the ideals which they lip at their bedside. Economists tell us that fairness and honesty would cure many evils; the business world is governed by greed and cheating. Philosophers tell us the way to happiness is purity and truth; purity and truth are scorned and happiness is a chimera. Christian morality is subverted every day by those who profess to be its teachers.

Two centuries ago, Jean-Jacques Rousseau looked at Europe, and said:

"Observe the perpetual quarrels, the robberies, the usurpations, the revolts, the wars, the murders which bring daily desolation to this venerable home of philosophy, this glittering sanctuary of art and science (Europe). Consider our fair speeches and our abominable acts, the boundless humanity of our maxims and the boundless cruelty of our deeds; our religion so merciful and our intolerance so ferocious; our policy so mild in our text-books and so harsh in our acts; our rulers so beneficent and our people so wretched; our governments so temperate and our wars so savage, and then tell me how to reconcile these glaring contradictions; tell me if the alleged brotherhood of the nations of Europe is anything more than a bitter irony to denote their mutual hatred."

Well, the world has always been full of contradictions and probably always will be. Just now there is a war going on, and while we bend solicitously to the care of refugees, and donate huge sums to look after the wounded and dying of Allied Europe, we exercise our best brains devising new methods of killing their enemy kinsmen in the most horrible possible way. The instincts of savagery and civilization work side by side and don't realize the incongruity.

We build with one hand, and destroy with the other.

Some day peace will be signed in Europe. Whether it will reign depends upon elimination of these contradictions.

MUSIC

Great artistry combined with fine music on Monday evening to give us a truly great piano recital. Robert Casadesu has been heard here before and his many radio performances are well-known but he revealed himself more than ever an artist of front rank in his program on Monday. This was the fourth in the season's series presented by Messrs. Belique and Payne and the concert was in keeping with the high standard set by previous events in the series.

Four composers were represented by major works and in all a lucid, unaffected style marked the playing. Six of the not-too-well known and seldom well-played sonatas of Scarlatti opened the recital and they set the evening off to a brilliant beginning. Delightful clarity at all times marked Mr. Casadesu's performances and the tone, rather far removed from the harpsichord original interpretations lent grandeur to these works.

Second came the Beethoven Variations in C minor which, all thirty-two remained fresh and spontaneous, in the pianist's interpretation. M. Casadesu's great genius for delicacy of shading and technical clarity and precision allowed this lovely work to be enjoyed completely. The chief work was perhaps Chopin's B flat minor sonata and here the performance was truly impressive. All the many emotional changes and contrasts in this heavy work were followed without excess, with true simplicity and a quiet reserve that bespoke the pianist's artistry.

French music has always found its best interpreters in French artists and so Debussy has found a brilliant exponent in M. Casadesu. His style, so well suited to Debussy and all the works of this great section of the recital were received with great enthusiasm. Six of the twenty-four "Preludes", "Feux d'Artifices", "La Cathedrale Engloutie", "Danseuses de Delphes", in turn spectacular and moody all were beautifully done.

Many additions came at the end and Montreal bade a most enthusiastic farewell to an artist we hope to have with us again next season. We are grateful to the organizers of this series for the splendid evenings they have given us and are looking forward with anticipation to the final concert of this season to be given by Marian Anderson.

Hostelling Holidays

It was in these same columns last year that I first heard of youth hostelling. Like many others, my imagination was stirred by this novel mode of travel and I determined to try it out. I soon learned that all hostellers travelled under their own steam, usually on a bicycle, and that at night they stayed in hostels, simple dwellings or farms which were gradually scattering themselves in groups and chains throughout all the most beautiful and scenic country on this continent. For my vacation, I planned a trip through New England and the White Mountains. Since then I have promised myself that never for long will I lose touch with the joys of hostelling. For in a scant ten days were crowded enough happiness, romance and delightful experiences to last a year.

The very first night was a revelation. Pleasantly tired after our ride from Montreal through the quiet countryside of the Richelieu, we took a moonlight dip in Lake Champlain. Then while we lay on our backs on the soft sand bordering the lake, we counted falling stars and watched the sparks shoot high into the sky until their glow was lost in that of the moon. Meanwhile the three of us alternated in telling ghost stories, and tales of our adventures on the hostelling trail. At last, later than usual, we rolled into our comfortable bunks and dozed off thankfully.

Interesting People.

The next day we hit the Green Mountains in earnest, slowing down our pace to that of a large and merry group we encountered on the road. This was the nucleus of the party we travelled with continually thereafter. What delightfully interesting people they were. During our vacation we accompanied, at various times, college boys from Princeton, Michigan, Harvard, Arizona, Toronto, and London, England, also girls from Wellesley, Chicago, U.C.L.A., and Queens; furthermore there were other young people on vacation from all parts of Canada and the states. With some of these we became such friends that we are still corresponding, while all are acquaintances to be greeted once again someday on the trail.

How we all pitied the poor tourists! Brushing past in their cars they saw little, heard nothing, met nobody. To us everyone was a friend. As we passed through quiet New England towns we were greeted and helped by everyone. What tourist could ever discover and swim in the wonderful ravine which gave us such an exciting time. Let me tell you about it.

A Swim in a Ravine.

The second afternoon as we approached our evening's resting place, we heard the roar of falling water deep in the woods behind the road. Having been warned by the villagers, we knew about them, and by common consent we drew our bikes into the brush and set off down the path. Soon we burst out onto a little plateau, overlooking a deep ravine through which our old friend the river tumbled down a steep flume, disappearing into a mass of fallen boulders and reappearing placidly far below. Through these rocks (evidently broken off from the craggy outlying cliffs) the river made a series of waterfalls and hidden caverns, which we determined to explore. Once changed into bathing suits, we assembled at the foot of the falls as from above the ravine was unapproachable. From here we planned to get up to the cave at the top, into which from above the river seemed to disappear.

Never before have I had such fun! Climbing up sheer cliff faces, edging up between sloping walls, and under waterfalls, swimming beneath overhanging rocks against the current, ever onward and upward we scrambled, until at last only three of us boys stood triumphant on the shores of the deep pool in the topmost basin.

A Petrified Log.

The interesting things we found here more than rewarded our perseverance. Lodged between two rocks was discovered an old log, its rings clearly marked—but turned completely into stone. A boulder had a large claw-like fossil on its upturned face. Strangest of all, one of us accidentally placed his foot in a perfect cylinder of stone—natural, but perfect in its smooth symmetry. To his surprise the water within was about 10° colder than that surrounding it, almost freezing in fact. On examination, this well shaped formation was found to be a natural spring in which the sand was at a level one and a half feet below the shore level. How far into the rock this fine, almost sculptured, spring extended, we could not see. Its radius was almost two feet.

Suddenly we realized that it was chilly, for in here there was no sun, and the water was the coldest I have ever swum in. So, leaving our discoveries, down the water course we swam and scrambled, emerging once more into the sun together with the rest of the party.

POEM FOR A DEMOCRATIC NEWS COMMENTATOR

The lowest of God's creatures is the awful Englishman.
 He emmings all his works with all the harm he safely can.
 He will not go to war, unless he thinks it's for his good,
 And won't take advice from others, as a decent person should.

Now, among the many duties he has failed in, he should run
 All creation in the spirit our idealists have begun.
 In a sane and Christian manner, though no country here below
 Will endeavour to do anything but criticize the show.

The Englishman has gone to war—a cruel person he,
 Who with lying propaganda seeks to trick neutrality,
 The Englishman remains at peace, enabling us to say
 "If we had his obligations, we'd be at the front today."

The Englishman must pay us to the limit of his cash
 For protecting all our interests in the European hash;
 If it wasn't for the Englishman, we'd have to go to war
 So we'll hinder him and curse at him, exactly as before.

The Englishman is selfish; he won't even let us aid
 The defences of his enemy, but clamps on his blockade,
 And we've got to make some money, though what we want to see
 If it kills each English soldier, is an English victory.

The Englishman has got a lot to answer for, they say,
 The Englishman has made the world just what it is today;
 The Englishman's responsible, on his head lie the curse,
 But if things were left to us, the world would be a damn sight worse.

 Bob: "How come?"
 Bill: "Oh, I guess she figured that a word to the wide is sufficient."

"Rastus, I see your mule has 'U.S.' branded on his hindquarters. Was he in the army?"
 "No boss, dat 'U.S.' don't stand for Uncle Sam. It means unsafe."

—Xaverian Weekly.

There he was, swimming in the cold water, battling heroically against the waves.
 "Just a half mile more," he thought, "and I'll make the shore."
 His strokes were getting weaker. He could hardly lift an arm anymore. The beach was only a few yards away. His last efforts were too much. He began to grow dizzy. Then his head began to swim, and carried him to shore.

Youth Hostels.

To the Editor of the McGill Daily.
 Sir—I would like to bring to the attention of the student body the series of articles on Youth Hostelling which began to appear yesterday in the Daily. These articles were designed to interest chiefly those students who have not yet completely planned their summer vacation. The Association, which was well supported last year by Mc-Gill students, again deserves their recognition. Despite war-time conditions, the movement is carrying on and expanding. New hostels will be opened in Quebec this year, while older ones all over the continent extend their privileges to passholders. We invite everyone unfamiliar with the Association to spend a few minutes acquainting themselves with hostelling ideals and customs. Those who leave their names in the Tuck Shop will be showered with propaganda and I am sure that the following, who have had hostelling experience, will be glad to give all who ask any information they require:

Conscription.

To the Editor of the McGill Daily.
 Sir—Why this talk about conscription?

At Confederation, Canadians agreed that, in danger, all men, from 16 to 60, are liable for service in our armed forces.

The law still exists, unchanged; that law is conscription. Why talk about it? It's there; and we want it there.

Should need arise, those whom we elect and through whom we govern ourselves, will state that need.

Canadians of today are meeting grave danger; they do so, in every Province, whatever their origin may be. The records of voluntary recruiting, in the last war and in this, stand proof of a universal Canadian willingness to defend the right. When conscription is used as a political football, we should remember this; also, no Canadian, especially those not of this Province, should ever forget that were it not for the loyal resistance of French Canadians, after 1776, Canada would have merged with the United States.

This being the time of year for the first appearance of pangs of regret for hours spent in the Pit instead of the Library, for recollection of successes and great deeds and others not so great, on the part of McGill's men and women and even for prophecy, we fall in line with a few of our own. Leaving for other places and times, lament over the flint-hard hearts of professors and the hovering and rapidly nearing spectre of examinations let us skip lightly over a few highlights in the past year's athletic scene.

The following few incidents are not meant to be this column's choice of the outstanding ones of the year, only a lineup of some scenes and events, several of them almost unnoticed, which stick in the mind. ... Coming back to register last fall while kills swung around the campus, the dull incredulous feeling caused by the war, gradually wearing off and the general question being what would happen to Intercollegiate Athletics. ... the lights in Molson Stadium shining white on a sea of 12,000 faces at the Football Pep rally. ... wondering "Is this only the beginning?" when the Senior hockey team was suddenly withdrawn from the Q.A.H.A. ... watching a clever and well coached soccer squad take the Intercollegiate title from rugged R.M.C. cadets in a strenuous mix-up of mud, snow and rough football.

The Senior football team's tank corps of a front line ploughing relentlessly through other outfits but almost always ending up on the wrong end of the score. ... the gymnasium cornerstone finally being well and truly laid after the Daily's rather ambiguous headlines on the subject had aroused ribald comment from Engineers and others. ... gloomy prophecies regarding the Senior hockey outfit being fulfilled as the team "blew hot" against Queens and cooled off for Toronto and finally allowed the Thompson trophy to be weepily dispatched to Toronto. ... the voices of some of McGill's best known skiers filling a wonderfully beautiful moonlit night with the words of several famous skiing songs as other competitors at the Intercollegiate Ski Union meet listened in envy.

In the field of prophecy we have not been as active or successful as others but we certainly wish that we could foresee the result of the meeting of the C. I. A. U. to be held in Montreal, March 29 and 30. This gathering may have decisions to make, whose effects will be far reaching, since it is believed that the question of continuance of Intercollegiate sports is up for discussion.

Rumors have it that sentiment of a majority of those who control McGill athletics would prefer to see (Continued on Page Four)

Building Available Tuesday and Thursday

The fondest dream of McGill students has finally come true and the student body now has adequate accommodation in a gymnasium of their own in which to carry on gymnastics and indoor sports.

Although the new gym is not yet completely finished the spacious gym floor is ready for use and will be open to all McGill students on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 3 to 6. Many McGill students have long desired gymnasium space on which to obtain some exercise in spring months as a relaxation from the examination grind and Mr. Van Wagner is doing everything possible this year in order that the students may come out to the new Sir Arthur Currie Gymnasium and compete in any form of exercise which they desire.

Floor Layout

The huge gymnasium floor has been divided into three courts and therefore basketball, volley ball and badminton games may be carried on simultaneously, while runners may practice conveniently around the sides of the large floor. The lockers and completed and are open to any students wishing to work out in the gymnasium. Students may if they desire keep their equipment in the lockers by furnishing their own locks, which must be removed by the end of the term. The showers will also be open for use for the students taking advantage of this opportunity to gain some exercise in indoor sports.

There will be badminton and volleyball nets for those desiring to participate in these sports and also plenty of basketballs for students choosing this method of relaxation. Parallel bars, horses and apparatus will also be available for students desiring to work out in gymnastics. This new convenience is expected to answer the wishes of many students for space in which to gain some exercise during the spring months and many should take this fine advantage. Mr. Van Wagner wishes to emphasize that students may come out and take part in any form of exercise which they desire, the gym floor being completely at their disposal on these two afternoons. The only indoor game which will be kept out of the new gym for the time being is baseball which takes up so much room that it would interfere with other activities in the gymnasium.

Medicos Compete in Challenge Cage Tilt

The Interclass basketball rivalry which has been raging among the medicos lately will blossom into actual competition tomorrow when Med. 5 meet the official champions of the loop Med. 1.

The cause of all this rivalry amongst the sawbones lies in a game which Med. 5 defaulted to the first year men during the scheduled season. As a result of this default and an otherwise fine schedule of wins Med. 1 captured the championship from a haughty quintet from Med. 5 and now the Seniors are out to prove that it was all a mistake. Great interest has been shown in this exhibition game which Med. 1 have chosen to play tomorrow and the competition should run high furnishing a fine game.

Reds, Indians In Invitation Ski Contests

Meet Takes Place at Mont Tremblant

Ski teams from Dartmouth and McGill will be the guests of Mr. Ryan this weekend, at his Mont Tremblant Lodge, for an invitation meet. These two top outfits have clashed twice before in official competition, the Redmen emerging a very close second each time.

Most of the McGill standbys will take part — Tirrell, the Moores and Mann — but Chris Mamen who missed the I.S.U. Meet due to injury, will not see action, and Bob Townsend will not make the trip. The Indians will not enter their jumpers or cross-country skiers, but will feature Chuck McLane, who was the star of the I.S.U. Meet.

Several competitors have already arrived, and it is hoped that Walter Prager, popular coach of the Hanover boys, will be there with his team.

To add colour to the proceedings, several of the McGill co-ed skiers are expected at the lodge, to stage a competition of their own.

A lot of girls will take a back seat provided it's a millionaire's limousine.—Brunswickan.

Skiers Seek Better Laurentian Facilities

The executives of the McGill Outing Club and the Youth Hostels have been in touch with each other on several occasions during the past few weeks in an endeavour to find some way of furthering skiing in the Laurentians in the form of ski tours. Mr. Johannsen, being on the advising board of both clubs, is attempting to further these plans of providing better accommodations for students taking part in ski trips in the Laurentians.

The main purpose of these talks with the Youth Hostels has been to gain better accommodations for McGill students desiring to take part in ski tours. The Youth Hostels are planning on establishing such cabins throughout the Laurentians in future years and it is hoped that arrangements may be made for McGill to make use of these facilities during the forthcoming years.

If these talks succeed further arrangements may be made concerning other activities, including hiking, cycling and cutting ski trails in the fall.

Nice figures are hot numbers. —Gateway.

CLASS OF 40

STEWART O'BRIEN

Stewart O'Brien, captain of the McGill Tennis Team, is another athlete that will be absent from intercollegiate competition next year. He entered McGill in 1932 and completed an Arts course; this spring will see him graduate from the Faculty of Law.

Slew, a Montrealer by birth and residence, received his schooling at Selwyn House and Trinity College School. At school he took a general interest in all sports, but on coming to college he specialized in tennis, a step which proved to McGill's advantage.

Stewart has been a regular member of the Red and White tennis team since 1933 with the exception of the year 1938 when he was kept off the courts because of a broken ankle. He was on the team in 1935 when it was successful in capturing the intercollegiate title and was captain of the group in 1936 and 1939.

His other college activities include membership in the Marlet and Scarlet Key Societies. After graduating he is anxious to take on a job in which to follow up his law study.

HON. C. H. CAHAN, K.C.

Conservative Candidate St. Lawrence-St. George

THE QUESTION OF UNITY.

(Editorial in the Montreal Gazette of March 9th, 1940)

The Hon. C. H. Cahan last night, in the second radio broadcast of his campaign in St. Lawrence-St. George, presented what is from the Government point of view a distinctly damaging analysis of the Prime Minister's national unity policy or plea. He recalled Mr. King's declaration of September 9th in which the leader of the Government asserted that he had never doubted that in the event of war "my honorable friend (the "leader of the official Opposition) and myself would be found instantly side by side in an endeavor to unite "the country as strongly as it can be united, so as to enable it to put forth a supreme effort to preserve and "defend the liberties of mankind." The Conservative opposition co-operated loyally up to the sudden dissolution of Parliament, a dissolution based ostensibly upon a quarrel that has developed within the ranks of the Liberal party. At the outbreak of the war, also, the Prime Minister and other Liberal spokesmen had urged that the unity of all Canadians was a prime requisite to the successful prosecution of the war. On February 22nd, Mr. King spoke over the air and it appeared then that the unity which he sought to achieve was a unity of the Liberal party, under its party standard, and not the national unity of all Canadians. In the Government's subsequent course, Mr. Cahan finds evidence that the resources of the Liberal party are now to be employed, not to achieve national unity but the victory of Liberal candidates, and that the election of any candidate not in close affiliation with the Liberal party organization is to be prevented by every means at the Government's command. "Nothing short of a complete partizan victory will now satisfy the Prime Minister."

This is very sharply pointed. For example, in Mr. Cahan's own case there is official evidence of Liberal determination to exclude from the new parliament one of the ablest men in Canadian public life, one whose loyalty has been amply demonstrated, whose desire to see this war prosecuted to a successful conclusion is at least equal to that of any member of the Government, and whose ability to promote the national war effort effectively as a member of the Parliament of Canada is not excelled by that of any member of Mr. King's cabinet, the Prime Minister included. The presence of Mr. Cahan in the new House of Commons will be a great asset to the Dominion. He has been in public life for a great number of years, for a considerable time as a Minister of the Crown, and his extensive administrative experience in the last war, an intimate experience, qualifies him exceptionally for useful parliamentary service in the present crisis. And yet, he and other Opposition candidates similarly equipped are to be defeated at any cost, if they can be defeated, and "not only "prevented from any participation in Canada's war efforts, but also precluded from all parliamentary discussion of the best means of waging a successful war."

What is true of Mr. Cahan's candidature is true of others in an election which has been forced upon opposition parties and upon the Canadian people, but Mr. Cahan's position as an official agent charged with momentous responsibilities during the last war and in connection with post-war matters arising from the great conflict of 1914-18, is exceptional, and the attempt which is being made to bar him from membership in the new House is therefore the more extraordinary. One of the most important and most representative constituencies in the Dominion is being asked by the Government to reject a man who ranks amongst the country's most capable parliamentarians, one whose experience is urgently needed at Ottawa, and to do this in the name of national unity and in the pretense that Canada's war effort would be strengthened thereby. Surely this is the strangest of all Canadian elections.

turned to bed, has tuned in his radio to the symphony and has started to read his script aloud.

A script. . . .
Yes, a script enters this domestic scene, too. Such extreme health precaution from a man, who, like myself, never believes in artificial cures, is caused by a radio audition he has tomorrow morning. He is anxious to prevent his voice from becoming husky and to keep that oncoming gripe from depriving him of too much energy. . . .

Think?
And so, in such an atmosphere,
I try to think. . . .

Who? mub?
Some may object to that word.
There are those who would deny that I ever tried to think and then there are those who would say that even if I did want to think, I could not do so to the accompaniment of swing and symphonic music, of petulant walls and modulated script reading, and of the high-toned click and the low-toned clack of two alarm clocks.

Readers who have come this far no doubt have already said, "We have adequate proof in this column that you cannot think in such an atmosphere"—a conclusive and incontestable argument. . . .

No trick at all. . . .
Since readers and writer agree to that thesis, I may as well stop the hunt for a tricky farewell column.
I will let my mind wander at will, merely musing about life and things. . . .

I will muse about a Manhattan that houses many tribes of which one part rises at 5.30 in the morning and works to noon, another rises at 7.00 a.m. and works to 5.00 p.m., and the third works from 5.00 p.m.
to 2.30 in the morning. . . .

I will muse about classical and swing music; about gastric juices and grapefruit juices; about attentive walls and ticking clocks. . . .

I will muse about life's problems —about radios, auditions; actors, ushers; tutors, teachers; newspapers, news; war—and, some day, peace. . . .

Music to the end. . . .

I will muse about the many things I have mused about each week and wonder if anyone is musing about me. . . .

the Redmen gradually withdraw from Intercollegiate competition and concentrate on Intramural sport and that this desire is not due solely to the war but also a manifestation of long-held opinions of certain members of the Athletics Board. The withdrawal of the Senior hockey team from the Q.A.H.A. was a manifestly unpopular decision with the students and this column believes that any serious curtailment of Intercollegiate athletics, unless it were absolutely impossible to continue, would also be against the wishes of the student body as a whole.

It will probably be said that the Athletics Board (composed incidentally, of a chairman appointed by the Senate, three members of the student staff, three graduates, three undergraduates and the Athletics manager) is more experienced and therefore knows just what should be done as regards Mc-Gill athletics. However, it's money paid by students that covers the cost of said athletics and here's one case where this writer believes that the people who pay should take a very active interest in what is done with their money. May we therefore point out to any readers who have struggled this far, that there are still a couple of issues of the Daily wherein their opinions pro and con can be expressed and also that the members of the Athletics Board (their names are in the "Bible") would probably be glad to listen to any intelligently expressed thoughts on the matter. Some will likely say, "Well, the Athletics Board can only advise our representative to the C.I.A.U. meeting and then again a lot may happen between now and next fall and anyway this meeting may not decide anything," and so on. This may all be true, but we think that it was partly due to this sort of apathy that McGill lost, probably for good, her franchise in the Senior Group. So, if you want the portion of your student fees which goes to athletics to be used to continue Intercollegiate sport if at all possible, or if you'd prefer more Intramural activity, let's hear about it. We know this is late to be bringing up this matter but since this is the last of these columns for the year things can be said now which might be a little risky at other times.

ENGINEERING SOCIETY ELECTION RETURNS

In the Engineering Undergraduates Society elections yesterday, about 85 per cent of the engineers cast votes. Despite the large number of votes polled, the margin between the candidates was narrow in all cases.

The results of the elections are as follows: Vic Savage, President; Cliff Morse, Vice-president by acclamation; Sam Hutchison, Secretary; Jim Stewart, Treasurer; and Bill Weber, Reporter.
